

G. O. P. ATTACKS PATERNALISM

Scores Administration's Scant Confidence in American Business Men.

The Republican Publicity Association, through its president, Jonathan Bourne, Jr., yesterday gave out the following statement at its headquarters:

"Deploable as is the record of this administration in the destruction of American enterprise through the enactment of a tariff-for-revenue-only law, a far more serious feature of that record is found in the marked tendency toward paternalism. The Democratic party evidently has lost confidence in the integrity or ability of the business men of America, for that party seems to deem it wise for the government to assume the ownership and management of various enterprises heretofore conducted by private concerns.

"The evils which grow out of this tendency cannot be measured in terms of money. We can make a fairly accurate computation of the destructive effects of the Democratic tariff law, but we shall never be able to compute, in money value, the injury which the American people will sustain through a policy of paternalism.

"The destroying influence of public ownership upon the creative, constructive spirit of enterprise among the most active and capable of our people, will be felt not merely in this generation, but in all time to come.

"Plausible pretexts may be advanced in support of government ownership of ships, the construction of nitrate plants, and the operation of armor plate factories. We can easily go a step farther and attempt to justify government ownership of the telephone and telegraph.

"The logical step beyond that is government ownership and operation of the railroads, after which we can justify government ownership of car-building plants, locomotive works, steel works, iron mines, saw mills, and all other enterprises largely connected with railroad maintenance and operation. Although advocates of new government projects now being undertaken deny intention to extend that policy as thus indicated, the natural and inevitable consequence is the substitution of paternalism for individual initiative—the deterioration of the individual, and the consequent decline of the nation."

DEMOCRATS TO CAUCUS ON CHILD LABOR BILL

"The Addition of the Immigration Amendment Would Impair Both Measures," Says Kern.

In an effort to defeat the Borah amendment to the child labor bill, which would tack the immigration bill, providing a literacy test for alien children, the Majority Leader Kern last night called a caucus of Senate Democrats tonight.

Opponents of the child labor bill devised the expedient of tacking on the literacy test knowing that President Wilson is pledged to veto legislation providing such a test, according to Senator Kern.

"Nine-tenths of the Democrats will stand firmly against the Borah amendment, but we want every Democrat against it," said Senator Kern tonight. "I feel certain that the amendment will be beaten. The addition of the immigration bill to the child labor bill would impair both measures."

"There is no need for the passage of the new immigration bill now, as immigration is inconsequential on account of the war. Immigration legislation could probably wait until next December."

TAKE CARE OF YOUR LIVER

And It Will Take Care of Your Constipation.

The liver is supposed to furnish the proper amount of bile for the intestines. This bile has two purposes—to help digest in the intestines that part of your food which the stomach is not meant to digest and to act as nature's laxative and prevent constipation.

It is plain to be seen that bile and the ordinary laxatives which do not act on the liver give only temporary relief. If you want to get back to normal and lasting results you've got to take the medicine that acts on the liver and causes it to furnish the bile which in turn acts on the bowels. The name of this simple but sure home treatment is Nature's Remedy—popularly known as NR Tablets.

An NR Tablet taken at night before retiring will tone up the stomach, put your liver to work and in the morning act thoroughly, but without griping, on the bowels. Nature's Remedy also relieves rheumatism, acts beneficially on the kidneys and purifies the blood.

No household should be without its box of NR Tablets—taken in time they will break up colds and prevent much sickness arising from disordered stomach or bowels.

Get a box of NR Tablets and take one to-night—you'll feel better in the morning.

NEW PHOTOGRAPHS OF MISS ELIZABETH RADCLIFFE, victim of the Olney, Ill., "air-death" mystery, and Roy Hinderliter, her boyish sweetheart, who is charged with the girl's death. The case promises to rival the Orpet-Lambert affair at Lake Forest, Ill.

ELIZABETH RADCLIFFE.

Olney, Ill., July 30.—State's Attorney Morris today worked on several new clues designed to strengthen the case against 17-year-old Roy Hinderliter, held for the tragic death of his youthful sweetheart, Elizabeth Radcliffe.

While they will not reveal what their latest probe has disclosed, county officials admit that the case against the farmer boy, who dashed up in a buggy nine days ago and delivered the body of his sweetheart at the Olney Sanitarium, grows darker hourly.

The cause of death has been said to be an air bubble in the heart, resulting from a building attempt to destroy evidence of an illicit love.

Feeling for the boy did not improve today, when it was learned that he is engaged to marry the daughter of a wealthy farmer of Crawford County. This girl had never heard of the unfortunate Miss Radcliffe and is prostrated at the plight of her fiancé.

The latest girl in the case is slated to be an important witness at the Hinderliter trial in November. In many respects she bears a similar position to Celestia Youker in the Orpet case, in fact. In many aspects, the case presents almost an exact parallel.

Officials today continued their minute search of the ground in the vicinity of the tree where Hinderliter and his sweetheart met for the last time, and they are yet hopeful that an important clue will be developed before this search is completed.

Miss Radcliffe died, it is charged, from air pumped into her veins. Hinderliter is held as her slayer. The defense says that the Olney girl took her own life rather than suffer disgrace.

PATHETIC CASE NEEDS RELIEF

Wife of Guardsman in Distressing Circumstances, Seeks Aid from Fund.

With her broken arm in a sling she entered the headquarters of the Citizens' Welfare Association in the Munsey Building. Her husband, who had always been able to support the little family of her and the two small children, was with the District militia on the border. The amount that he was able to send her pay day was soon spent for food and left nothing for rent. The landlord had served notice that she must move. She had heard of the work being done by the Welfare Association and not having any other friends to appeal to she had looked them up.

Upon being questioned by Mrs. Alice L. Stuart, executive secretary in charge of the office, she confided that she was without a penny in the world and that with two small children to care for she could not work, willing though she was, and that the landlord was to put her furniture in the street the next morning.

Through the influence of Mrs. Stuart she was admitted to Camp Good Will, the Associated Charities' outing camp in Rock Creek Park.

There her arm is getting better and the two children are enjoying themselves. But the two weeks' time will soon fly by and then the storage will have to be paid on her furniture and a month's rent paid in advance for a home for them to go to. This is but one of the many cases that the association is handling. John Poole, chairman of the finance committee, announces that more funds are needed. They should be sent to the headquarters, 715 Munsey Building.

The establishment is run on the "credit to all" principle, each man being allowed to run up a bill of $5 a month, which is deducted from his monthly pay. Kelly has a stock that is worth over $50, he says.

Private O. H. Butler, of Battery B, has a cornet, and he plays that cornet when he feels blue or at any other time he wishes. "Battery Bill," the new English bull dog, always accompanies him with his vocal efforts.

M. R. Moffett, who was a champion runner in his college days, received a box of cakes, chicken and other "goodies" from his home folks. But his Battery A comrades in the "top" sergeant's tent, let him know that he could not run fast enough to get away from them. He had to share his sweets.

Daniel Herzog and Edward Lewis, of Battery A, imported a set of boxing gloves into camp with the intention of using them on each other before breakfast each morning. No one has seen them fight anything but sleep before breakfast any morning.

"Kid" Fitzpatrick, Philadelphia boxer, is a member of the regimental sanitary troops. He is also an ex-jockey, having ridden at Pimlico, Belmont and Saratoga.

Sergeant Gerald McGrath was seen walking about the company street holding a umbrella over his head, but no rain was falling, and the sky was only cloudy. His men are wondering why he did it.

If he can get permission, or evade the guards at the bottom of the three big wireless towers, Private G. C. Streeter, of Battery B, declares that he will plant an American flag on the top of the largest of them for the small sum of $5. Some of his friends are willing to supply the money, and the only obstacle is the permission.

Betting in the batteries that they will leave on August 6, is about even, although odds are given that they will entrain then. "Two bits" is about the limit on the bets; the men have not been paid yet.

A flyless mess tent for the officers of the batteries has been built by Charles A. Keefe, chief mechanic; A. F. Bernau, first mechanic, and George Wille, second mechanic, of Battery B.

Irvin McConnell, former member of Company G, visited the camp and announced that he would enlist as soon as there were sure indications of the Third Infantry leaving for the border.

Private Joseph P. Annin, of Troop A, has been on leave to visit the bedside of his mother in New York, who

CHARGES POLICE SOLD TENDERLOIN PRIVILEGES

Gotham Prosecutor Declares Woman Has Letter Signed by Official Giving Her Immunity.

Special to The Washington Herald.

New York, July 30.—That a letter was signed by a police official granting a woman of the underworld immunity from arrest, as well as the right to ply her calling in a certain zone in the Tenderloin district, was the subject of the startling information Edward Swann, district attorney, says he has received.

According to the prosecutor the police apportioned the Tenderloin to these women and sold districts to the highest bidder. The letter, Mr. Swann says, is signed by a police official.

"We have information that sections of the Tenderloin were thus sold to various women," he said. "She paid a high price for the privilege, but the police evidently lived up to the bargain, for this letter seemed to make her immune to arrest. On the other hand, any other woman caught in the particular district mentioned was at once arrested and in many instances sent to Blackwell's Island for infringing on some one else's territory. The women of the underworld know this situation very well and they are careful not to get into the restricted territory."
